Dec. 1. 91

My dear Miss Mason.

You must be wondering at no letter from me, in answer to your very kind one of last week. One cause of delay has been that Professor Stuart Poole has been away, & I have had no chance of seeing him, & I thought the Child's Guide might wait a few days - Thanks very much for all your kindly say. The second cause of day has been. That Mrs Culverhouse turned up last week without her daughter but on my representing that you particularly wished me to see her, that young lady turned up this afternoon with an Elder sister.

The Culverhouses seem sensible & very intelligent people, & Mary herself looks a quiet earnest girl. She assures me that she is very strong in health, & is devoted^{127p2pneu8} to Children. She looks Capable, & is neat in style.

They seemed to be under the impression that the House of Ed. opens in the Spring, but I told them I thought it was soon after Vmas. They were anxious to know the lines of Education; &
I referred them to "Home Education", & the P.R.
Neither of which books had they seen. They also

1
wanted to know ^{i 27 p 4 pngv 8} what w^d be the position of the Trained nurse. I said! That the demand for the Trained nurse came from the Upper Classes & that the position w^d most likely be that of a governess. e.g. meals with the children in the nursery, & I suppose a nursery maid to clean, carry water & push perambulator?
Under the Trained nurse's direction. The girl is not accomplished, & seems afraid of being asked to do much teaching.
They wanted also to know if the boarding house was a house just newly built for the purpose.

I said. I thought not.
Have you heard of many students yet? I have sent off all the prospectuses I had to the likeliest people I know. but haven't heard of anyone yet. I should be so glad if I can interview any one else for you.

I have been the best part of today at the Private View of the Victorian Exhibition
There is much that is very interesting. Especially should I like you to see Maurice & Rungley
Portraits by Lowes
Dickenson, & Miss
Muloch's by Herkomer.
There is also a very delightful portrait of

dear Mr Fawcett.

But like the children,
I do wish it had been the Plantagenets this year! Still in spite of the wearisome, endless & badly painted Royal Christenings & weddings

The exhibition as a whole certainly does help one to realize what a wonderful age this is, there are models of the first loom, sewing machine,

railway engine, telephone telegraph apparatus &c. &c.

& the autograph letters & first editions of famous books are delightful.

I do hope you are going to take a little rest in the coming holidays. Though I fear this is scarcely possible with your "last child"

not able to run alone!

With much love & all possible good wishes for success

Affectionately yours
Frances E. H. S.
